The Victim is a novel by Saul Bellow published in 1947. As in much of Bellow's fiction, the protagonist is a Jewish man in early middle age. Leventhal lives in New York City. While his wife is away on family business, Leventhal is haunted by an old acquaintance who unjustly claims that Leventhal has been the cause of his misfortune.

~~The Victim (novel) - Wikipedia~~

In a Guggenheim Fellowship application in 1945, Saul Bellow described his then work-in-progress, "The Victim" as "a novel whose theme was guilt." He worked assiduously on this novel between 1945 - 1947 when it was published to poor sales. In 1952, a stage version of the book ran briefly off-Broadway.

Unfortunately, Saul Bellow is not one of those authors. The victim is a story about Asa Leventhal and his unexpected acquaintance, Kirby Albee, who accuses Leventhal of deliberately ruining his life. While the premise was promising, I was disappointed with where it went.

The Victim, by Saul Bellow. Modern Man as Jew. The Victim. by Saul Bellow. New York, Vanguard, 1947. 294 pp. $2.75. In most American fiction concerned with Jews in more than an incidental way, Jewishness has been looked on as constituting a kind of world, and Jews as people who inhabit this world. This Jewish world had a distinct and recognizable geographical location—the East Side, the Bronx, Williamsburg, Coney Island, to name a few of the places—and spoke a distinct and recognizable ...

Saul Bellow's novel, The Victim, first got under my skin about fifteen years ago. It is not an easy book to read, but not because it isn't well written or well conceived. The style of writing here is very clean, particularly in comparison to later works by this same author, and the plot is both very simple and very tight, maybe too tight for readers who prefer to luxuriate in a more leisurely unfolding of events.
